National Model United Nations is a collegiate level simulation of United Nations diplomacy. Typically, each university delegation will represent one country with individual students or student-pairs representing that country on specific committees. Students research their assigned country’s position with respect to their committee issues for months in advance of the competitions. Each delegate prepares a position paper and submits it in advance of the competition. The Model United Nations Team at UT Dallas has traditionally sent delegations to three to four conferences each year.

Additional Information

Email UTDMUN@gmail.com.